

FOUR MORE ALLEGED OWNERS OF WAHIAWA 'BLIND PIGS' ARE NABBED

Series of Raids and Arrests By Police in Attempt to Clean Up Resort Near Schofield

Raids on Wahiawa "blind pigs," commencing Saturday afternoon, are still continuing, and this morning four additional suspects were rounded up and faced Police Judge Monsarrat on charges of both selling and keeping intoxicating liquors at Wahiawa. Ralph Gonsalves waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the grand jury.

The other seven defendants were offered release on bonds or bail to appear Friday morning for trial. James Field, an ex-colored soldier, faces two charges and bail was fixed at $400 in his case. His white wife also faces two charges, and bail in her case was fixed at $200. William H. Tompkins reserved his plea until Friday. All the others entered pleas of not guilty.

Those arrested to date are: James Field, colored, former soldier of the 25th Infantry who followed his former comrades to Schofield, and who, with his white wife, runs a rooming house at Wahiawa.

Ralph Gonsalves, colored, retired leader of the 25th Infantry band. Mrs. Blair, who also runs an establishment at Wahiawa, is the wife of a federal prisoner now serving a sentence of a year and one-half.

Corporal W. M. Alford, colored soldier, is reported to have run a restaurant and a questionable establishment at Wahiawa.

William H. Tompkins, retired sergeant of the 25th Infantry, alleged that he conducted a dive at Wahiawa. Mrs. Mary Kahae, who posed as wife of Tompkins. She is a Hawaiian and was given until tomorrow to raise $200 bail.

Frank Hawkins, civilian employe in the Schofield Barracks laundry. Faces two charges of selling and keeping illicit booze.

Mrs. James Field, accused jointly with her husband.

Alford, Mrs. Kahae, Tompkins and Hawkins were arrested today. The raid was conducted by License Inspector Pennell and Deputy City and County Attorney Chillingworth. Field is now on parole from a suspended sentence in Circuit Judge Ashford's court on a similar charge. The alleged joints are on both sides of the road near Wahiawa village and it is reported that on pay nights revelry and carousing are at their height there.

Mrs. Blair presented a pitiable

Light Sidelights on Police Court Scenes

The old problem of the coming visit of the mother-in-law held no terrors for J. K. Iokapa; that is, until "she" got there yesterday. Then it was different, and Iokapa settled the question in his own way. Today he was arrested on complaint of the lady, who says her son-in-law choked her.

Ten Japanese sat in a circle at a School street establishment on Saturday night and staked their week's wages against one another in games of chance. In walked detectives from Captain McDuffie's office and the 10 went to jail, only to be released on bail soon afterward. Eight of the 10 repaired to another joint on River street near Beretania Sunday night and again in walked the officers.

William Spicer, a pioneer on the Honolulu taboo list and who was arrested a few days ago for being found in a saloon, tried a new way to get booze yesterday; that is, it was a new way for Willie. He decided to impersonate a man in a fit in hopes that spirituous stimulants would be given to him. But alas, Willie was taken to Queen's hospital and given a drink of water.

Tom Blevins came home Saturday night feeling quite exuberant and in the midst of a verbal combat with his wife, Mary. Tom grabbed an iron skillet and tried to carry on a successful attack. Mary resented this form of warfare and she grabbed a platter. This she aimed with great skill at Tom's head. The range was well estimated and charge was well timed, so Tom was taken to Queen's hospital for repairs to his cut head, and later to the police station for safe keeping.

Complaints were made to the police last night by hotels and rooming houses in the vicinity of Pauahi street near Fort, against the shouting and howling at the Holy Rollers' hall on Pauahi street, where, it was reported, a soldier had just been "converted" and to show his sincerity is rolling and howling all howling and rolling records. Policemen Sanders was sent to the hall to investigate. The religious show his authority to break up a religious meeting and as this point somewhat puzzled the policeman, a compromise was effected whereby the meeting broke up at 10:30 o'clock.

wife is a white woman. The negro husband is also accused of selling booze without authority of law.

As the two women sat there, the little girl began to whimper. She needed the attentions of a mother. Turning her back to the crowd and shielding herself and the little girl as well as she could, the mother tried to attend the child. But the baby in her arms made the task impossible. Then the other woman, the negro's wife, bent forward and took from the mother's arms the squirming baby and held it gently until the mother's task was done. And for a moment all hardness fled from the faces of the two women. They exchanged the faint, worn, sorrowful glances of smiles.

Both women are well-known to the police. Illicit liquor selling is not all ascribed to them. The little bent woman whose husband is serving a federal sentence is, say the police, guilty of a graver offense than selling liquor, an offense at which the duty city attorney hinted when he spoke of her little, dirty room at Wahiawa and surroundings so dreadful that jail for a babe in arms and a girl of three is preferable to that dishonored home. Thinking of these six children, four of them known to be weak-minded, the other two yet too small for intelligence; thinking of the mother's queer, distorted, empty face; of poverty and misery—thinking of these things the observer at the police court feels less indignation than pity at the thought of what she is charged with and what is whispered about her.

Yes, the police-court crowd had its morbid, staring, unclean, cold, gratified this morning. The news had gone forth that Wahiawa's "Blood Town" had been raided, and these were some of the people who have helped give that "town" its unlvely and significant name.

HOUSEKEEPING HINTS

Not yet do housekeepers realize the wonderful labor saving appliances ready to their hand, appliances that virtually solve the vexing servant problem which harasses every housekeeper nowadays whether she pays wages to one, two or half a dozen domestics.

These labor saving appliances are the various electric devices which make nothing at all of the hitherto burdensome household tasks, and in a home equipped with modern electric appliances one maid can do the work for a family of eight with ease. Of course, the electric contraptions cost a good deal to install, but their initial cost will be well paid for in the saving of time and wages throughout many years thereafter.

The electric washing machine in the kitchen washes the household linen and even sheer, delicate personal finery in quick time and perfect manner. Meanwhile the cook may be attending to her baking, or, if she is also general maid, may be sweeping out porches and hall. In the afternoon the electric mangle and flatiron will make short work of finishing the laundry process, and an extra woman may be had in for a half day to take this work off the general maid's hands.

Electricity also helps the cook to prepare the meals with special meat choppers, bread, cake and mayonnaise mixers, nut grinders, cream whips, fitted saucepans and pots for one gas burner, and slicers that cut twenty slices of bread in half a minute. Thermos bottles will keep sauces piping hot for hours, and cocktails iced cold, so that in preparing a large dinner everything will not have to be rushed at the last minute.

FADS AND FANCIES

Midsummer brings the really flimsy gown, as ephemeral as possible. For such a frock nothing is lovelier than the embroidered Swiss flouncing with which the white counters are heaped high. It is not very expensive; it is quite durable, and very appropriate to the tiers of ruffles which we call skirts this season. Some very attractive gowns of old-fashioned mull in white and blue were shown recently in a collection from Paris; while literally millions of yards of tulle have been employed by the designers for afternoon and evening frocks. Net is an admirable substitute for tulle if you want a gown to give you longer service, while the organdies are delightful. There is a new kind in fine white with a flower in a butterfly embroidery upon it at intervals, in two colors.

Old-fashioned flowered lawns and muslins have reappeared, together with Irish dimity. Girlish frocks are evolved from pale colored organdie, pink, lavender, yellow and trimmed with many tucks or narrow pleatings. Cotton voile or cotton crepe are fabrics of many possibilities which have been wonderfully developed by domestic manufacturers. Stripes of literally all known kinds are found here, and dainty chaille patterns, with checks, diamonds, dots and the new wallpaper designs of stripes and flowers combined. In all-white crepes there is a damask stripe or figure which is very good, and more expensive varieties are hand painted.

Many frocks are constructed of

HARRY MURRAY SAYS HE NEVER HAD VACATION

Harry Murray, superintendent of the water and sewer works department, who was reported to have suddenly started on a vacation on Maui following his "mysterious" departure on the Mauna Loa Friday night, denied today that he intends to take a vacation.

"A vacation?" he said. "What is a vacation? I've never had one, and don't intend to have one. Ben Hollinger, our erstwhile supervisor, and myself slipped out quietly Friday night to Maui to take a look at the water wheels at the Pioneer mill."

"Murray is right," admitted Hollinger today. "We got back yesterday morning." Superintendent Frazer of the lighting department has recommended the Pelton-Doble wheel and I argued for open competition. The Pioneer mill people, who have both the Allis-Chalmers and the Pelton-Doble, highly recommended the former wheel in preference to Frazer's choice."

FASHION JOTTINGS

To keep furs from moth's hark them on the line for several days and beat them well. Put them in an unbleached muslin bag, tied tightly at the top. Moths never will enter.

A serviceable house skirt is of dark blue denim, made in a plain, simple way. It is easily washed and will outwear all other kinds of goods. Denim sells at 12 1/2 or 15 cents per yard.

Handkerchief linen can be purchased for 50 cents a yard, and this will make nine handkerchiefs. They can be hemstitched and an edge of lace sewed on; they are very pretty.

A little green sage placed in the pantry will keep out red ants.

When the floor cloth gets really dirty wash it with clean warm water, adding a little liquid ammonia. Change the water frequently; use a big soft cloth and wipe dry with a duster, as little pools of water left will rot the cloth.

The woman whose time is valuable, but who desires everything to be neat and trim, will always keep on the pin cushion in her sewing room a needle threaded with white thread and one threaded with black, so she can sew on buttons and hooks and eyes in a hurry. Often when dressing a button or hook becomes loosened, and it can be replaced in a minute's time if one has the threaded needle on hand and does not have to look first for the thread and then for the needle.

Pure alcohol can be used with wonderful success as a means of cleaning black Spanish or Quaintly lace. The alcohol should be poured into a clean basin and whipped with the hand until it is foamy, when the lace should be dipped into it and well worked about with the fingers until the dirt is removed. After gently squeezing out the spirit the lace should be laid on a folded cloth, the patterned edge pulled out, each scallop or point being fastened down with a pin. When perfectly dry the lace should be unplanned and pressed gently between the palms of the hands until smooth in lieu of ironing it, as this would flatten the pattern and spoil the color.

TO CLEANSE FEATHERS.

Dip them in a jar of gasoline and leave them there for a few minutes; then remove and rub them with a cloth. This will usually make the feathers come out beautifully white.

Another way to treat feathers is to rub them thoroughly with magnesia or French chalk and wrap in tissue paper and lay aside for several days, rubbing gently with magnesia each day. At the end of four or five days' time they should be quite clean.

DEMAREE GOING GOOD.

Recently "Al" Demaree won his fifth consecutive game, and some admirers of the one-time Giant twirler telegraphed the fact to McGraw.

handkerchief linen, both white and colored. Often two colors are combined in one gown. New are the all-over flower patterns and the patterned stripes—a white one and a colored one—the colored powdered with tiny dots. For example. Bordered linens, as well as cotton crepes and voiles, are shown in great assortment, but gowns of bordered material require great ingenuity in the making, or they will appear too obvious.

Perfect economy in the home is not practicable except through the sincere cooperation of every member of the family. One person's careless spending must completely frustrate the earnest efforts of all the others to provide for the future. All should endeavor to gauge maximum expenditures by the minimum prospective income, always providing the biggest possible margin for emergencies.

In this way it will soon be learned what are actual necessities and what are simply "leaks." Then the "leaks" can be stopped and the margin of savings deposited in the bank as a reserve fund to safeguard the home against any possible reverses that may come.
